SUBSCRIBERS COMPLETE LIBERTY BOND PAYMENTS

Do not fail to complete your Liberty Bond payments is the appeal of Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo, as sent to Twelfth Federal Reserve District Liberty Loan head-

Following is the secretary's appeal: "Many employers throughout the country have rendered most patriotic assistance in the distribution of Liberty Loan Bonds to their employees and have assisted them in the purchase of these bonds by arranging that payments may be made in installments covering a period of time longer than that which could be granted by the Treasury Department.

"It is the duty of the subscribers to bonds on these partial-payment plans to complete the contract into which they have entered. If they do not do so, both they and the government suffer, as the bonds for which they have contracted and for which they do not pay in full must usually be sold in the open market.

"It is, of course, recognized that in case of necessity caused by sickness or other unavoidable circumstances, cancellations of subscriptions or sales of bonds are warranted. In cases where employees have made arrangements to purchase these bonds on installment plans and then sever their connection with the employer with whom they have made subscriptions, arrangements should be made for the completion of the subscription or for having the subscription taken care of by the new employer or by a bank in sale of the bonds covered by the sub-

WILL MAKE MEN WELL BEFORE FINAL DISCHARGE

The government is working on a scheme for the rehabilitation of 'all mained and ill troops, every man being discharged in as perfect condition as it is possible to make him. It will be necessary to establish many camps throughout the country where men may be treated according to their ailing all County Councils to keep up ments and as fast as they are in conthe fight against prostitution and sale dition they will be discharged. As a result of this order there will be many cantonments established with the best and most uptodate hospitals possible. It will be noted that the casualties in the American army have reached close to 240,000 men, about 180,000 being gassed, wounded and diseased soldiers. Everyone will be treated by specialists and it is expected about ninety per cent of them will be turned out entire-

FATHER TAKES PLACE

Major Clay C. MacDonald, of Missouri, did not consider his one and sixty years any reason why he should stay at home in St. Joe when his old regiment was ordered to France last Spring.

No one in the old outfit is more tanned than he today, and not a mile of their hiking over the long French roads has he missed. But it was not until his division was at the height of its job in the Argonne that he took command in the field.

He had long been chafing over his sheltered task as divisional postmaster, and the thought of it was almost insupportable when the fighting ahead became hot and he knew that somewhere in the thick of it his son-Lieut, Donald Malcolm MacDonald - was leading a platoon.

There one day-the third day of the Battle of Argonne-a courier brought the news of the wreck of a villiage then serving as divisional headquart-ers that Lieut. MacDonald had been killed in action, shot and killed instantly while leading a little knot of his men in an attack on a German ma-chine gun nest. When young Mac-Donald fell the machine gunners had thrown up their hands and cried quits, but they spoke too late. To General's Dugout-

This was the news the courier brought the major. Those near him in the villiage street, when the courier had finished, saw him turn and walk to the general's dugout.

"General," he said, "they've killed my son. I want a battalion." And before the sun had set that day he was in the field with a battilion of battling Kansans, officered, here and there, by men who had seen service under Funston in the great days of the old 20th Kansas.

One after another three of the officers were killed at the head of that battilion in Argonne, and when it came out of the line Major MacDonald was in command. The sight of his mud-crested overcoat, slit and torn by machine gun bullets, today bears witness to the nature of the fighting into which he went.—Stars and Stripes.

LIQUOR AND PROSTITUTION TO BE KEPT UNDER BAN

The State Council of Defense, at the request of the government, is urgof liquor to soldiers. The follownig exhortation has been sent to each County Council:

Protection of Soldiers "The signing of the armistice in no ways lessens the responsibility of the civil communities for the protection of soldiers from prostitution and the sale of liquor. All states and cities ought never lose the control which has been established or stop this vital work." This is the message telegraphed by Secretary of War Baker to all governors of states.

The government proposes to leave no measures unused in continued repression of prostitution and sale of liquor from now until such time as demobilization is fully accomplished. The War Department is fully determined to return soldiers to their families and to civil life uncontaminated from disease.

Reports of laxity from your community after so much has been done would be a disaster to our soldiers and their families.

You are requested to consult with your local health officers and authorities and assist them to prevent any relaxation of efforts. The gains of the last eighteen months will be lost unless vigilance is now increased. Phoenix, Arizona. November 14, 1918
